

After so many years of unsuccessful and cruel animal testing, it is high time that all government agencies adopt more accurate and humane in vitro methods.

Time and again, it has been proven that animal tests cannot and their results cannot be applied to humans. We are not mice or dogs or even chimpanzees (in spite the fact that we share 98% of our genes with the latter). Animal research is not only tremendously cruel but very expensive. This tax-payers money should instead go to modern non-animal research which has proven to be much more reliable.

Many thanks,

Catalina Kidd